Parent Resource Center

Research Findings-Broken Compass (Robinson and Harris, 2014)

- 1. Parents across ethnic groups are relatively similar in the amount of engagement in children's schooling but the type of engagement differs substantially
- 2. Many low-income parents across a wide spectrum want to be involved in their children's school lives, but they often receive little support from the school system. For immigrant families, language barriers only worsen the problem.
- 3. Some parent involvement strategies work for some groups but not for others ONE SIZE DOES NOT FIT ALL (pp. 82-83, Figures 4.11 and 4.12)

Foundation of Parent Engagement Strategies

- Partners in Education: A Dual Capacity-Building Framework for Family-School Partnerships (Mapp & Kuttner, 2013)
  - Opportunity conditions for family engagement to flourish
  - Trust and respect are established between home and school
  - Families and school staff see each other as equal partners
  - Capacity building for educators and families to partner around student success
  - Orientation towards partnership with student achievement and school improvement being a shared responsibility
